

From Individual Action to Collective Impact: Strengthening Equitable and Sustainable Research Partnerships

The role of BRAMA in advancing equitable research collaboration

Juliana Juk Susnik¹
Brazilian Research Administration and Management Association
Vice-President

From Individual Action to Collective Impact

- Initiate equity-focused dialogue with partners
- Integrate equitable practices into governance structures
- Bridge institutional and cultural contexts
- Bring equity considerations into strategic and operational decision-making

- Common language and shared understanding of equity
- Coordinated advocacy across institutions
- Structural and institutional change
- Expanded international influence

Actions

Knowledge Dissemination:

Strategic communication through BRAMA channels to expand awareness of Equitable Partnership in International Collaboration (EqPIC)

Engagement in conferences and workshops focused on EqPIC

National Engagement:

Organization and participation in three conferences, in partnership with Brazilian institutions, focused on equitable research collaboration.

Representation & Influence:

Research groups

International associations (e.g. SRAi and INORMS)

Forums with Brazilian funding agencies

Associação Brasileira de Gestores de Pesquisa
Brazilian Research Administration and Management Association

Image generated @Canva

The Take-Home Messages:

Research managers are agents of change

Equity is built through consistent practice

Associations amplify individual efforts

Sustainable partnerships are human, institutional, and financial

¹ jukjuliana@gmail.com